WELCOME TO VINCENNES!

The reason why Vincennes is so charming and attractive is the fact that despite its historical character it has nevertheless kept up with the times. Due to its strategic geographical location close to Paris and the fact that it is situated half way between the Parisian airports of Orly and Roissy, the town boasts many assets, thanks to its unique environment consisting of the Chateau, some very varied architecture and the woods nearby, as well as both its quality public facilities and the many reputed shops and businesses to be found nearby.

Since Vincennes has such a rich cultural life and because of the way its exceptional architectural heritage has been strongly emphasized recently, the town was awarded the Town of Art and History Label 'label Ville d'art et d'Histoire' in 2012. The town's woods, monuments, Chateau, Town Hall, the Church of Saint-Louis as well as the many other sites well worth a visit (such as the racecourse and the floral park amongst others) attract thousands of visitors every year.

In order to discover everything Vincennes has to offer, a visit to the Tourist Office is a must! Inside this venue completely dedicated to what the town can offer to tourists and which is situated just opposite the Chateau you will find everything you need to know to make your stay a successful one.

Charlotte Libert-Albanel
Maire de Vincennes

A TOWN LOADED WITH HISTORY

VINCENNES, A ROYAL TOWN

Although Vincennes' history is closely related to the history of the town's woods and Chateau, it is also closely linked to the History of France as Vincennes was a royal residence for almost 500 years.

In fact in the 12th century King Louis VII decided to have a hunting lodge built in the Forest of Vincennes (called Vilcena at this time), as it was a preferred hunting ground amongst monarchs.

In the 14th century whilst the Chateau was still under construction King Charles V had an outer courtyard added on to the building work which was to serve as lodgings for the royal family's servants. Later, the hamlet of Pissotte appeared, of which the name derives from a stream originating from the Montreuil hillsides. In 1667 Pissotte and the Outer Courtyard merged into the same parish which kept the same name Pissotte. In 1787 administrative reforms led to the creation of the Borough of Vincennes.

URBANIZATION

The military presence in the Chateau as well as the numerous barracks set up in the woods and more particularly the arrival of the railway brought about a huge population increase between 1851 and 1901, during which the number of inhabitants in Vincennes soared from 4 800 to 31 500. The town's population continued to grow as the transport networks were improved (that is, the tramways, buses, the 'metro' which arrived in 1934 and later with the suburban train network 'RER A' which was launched in 1969.

Today, Vincennes, which has a population of over 50 000 is divided into seven districts.

THE HISTORY OF THE WOODS

The woods which belonged to either the State or the Crown up until the time of the Second Empire were sold to Paris under the law of 24th July 1860. They became part of the Borough of Paris in 1929.

Throughout the 19th and 20th centuries military establishments and all kinds of amenities were set up there according to the town's needs. As far as the military establishments are concerned some remain standing such as the Fort neuf, the Pershing stadium, the Bégin hospital, the Carnot Barracks and the Cartoucherie (former munitions factory). Others also remain and have become symbols of Vincennes such as the floral park, the Paris-Vincennes Racecourse and the Paris Zoological Park, commonly known as Vincennes Zoo.

FOCUS

Saint Louis' Oak Tree

The picture of Saint Louis applying justice under an oak tree is one of the most popular pictures of the woods of Vincennes and often features in history manuals.

A few famous names from Vincennes

Pierre Daumesnil (1776-1832)

This French general became known as 'Wooden Leg' after losing a leg in the Battle of Wagram in 1809. In his status as Governor of the Chateau of Vincennes since 1812, he defended the stronghold against the allied Austrian, Russian and Prussian troops who had occupied Paris in 1814.

Ferdinand Foch (1851-1929)

Marshall Foch signed the Armistice which marked the end of the First World War. He resided in Vincennes at avenue Marigny during his post as officer at the Chateau between 1893 and 1895; this street where he lived was later named avenue Foch in 1929.

Charles Pathé (1863-1957)

After founding the family workshops as well as a film studio in Vincennes in 1896, Charles Pathé made the town the world's film capital at the beginning of the 20th century. He is buried in the town's older cemetery.

Pierre Messmer (1916-2007)

Pierre Messmer, who was born in Vincennes, rue des Deux-Communes, was Charles de Gaulle's Minister of the Armed Forces and later Prime Minister under Georges Pompidou, after first becoming a hero of the Second World War battle of Bir-Hakeim and Companion of the Liberation.

Bourvil (André Raimbourg, 1917-1970)

Between 1943 and 1947, at the beginning of his acting and singing career, the actor and comedian Bourvil lived in a tiny flat situated on rue des Laitières in Vincennes.

Jean Rochefort (1930-2017)

This French actor who has appeared in 135 films and series has received many awards including three César Awards. He lived in Vincennes from the end of the 1940's to the beginning of the 1950's.

Alphonse Halimi (1932-2006)

The 1957 World Bantomweight Boxing Champion lived in Vincennes in the 1960's and kept a bar there on the avenue du Château.

Kun Woo Paik (born in 1946)

This virtuoso pianist of Korean origin has lived in Vincennes since 1980. Awarded the French Diapason d'or distinction for best instrument in 1993, he continues to enjoy a brilliant international career.

VINCENNES AND THE CINEMA

Thanks to the Pathé brothers who founded their film manufacturing company and recording studios here, Vincennes was the centre of the film industry until the middle of the 20th century.

Even today some of the most famous French film directors such as Claude Chabrol, Patrice Leconte or Costa Gavras come to Vincennes to film. There are also a certain number of cinema producers and post-production firms which are established in Vincennes.

The Pathé factories

The Pathé family settled in Vincennes in 1865. The family's sons set up their film printing workshop as well as a recording studio here. The Pathé firm which soon became the world's largest film manufacturer witnessed a decline when Hollywood was created. Charles Pathé sold his firm to the Eastman-Kodak Company in 1927, which led to the creation of Kodak-Pathé. The factory site which was destroyed in 1987 has since been replaced with a new district comprising of living accommodation, offices and public amenities.

EMBLEMS

The town's emblems also allude to its history

Motto

« LILIIS JUSTITIA, LAPIDIBUS FAMA »
(The justice of lilies, the fame of stones)

Coat of Arms

It was designed in 1942 by the heraldry creator Robert Louis, who was a native of Vincennes.

Flag

It was designed by Olivier Touzeau in 2007 to mark the occasion of the Year of the Chateau (Année du château) and the re-opening of the keep to the public.

TWIN TOWNS

Lambeth (United Kingdom)

A town of the Greater London Borough famous for its big wheel, the London Eye.

Castrop-Rauxel (Germany)

A town situated in the Eastern Ruhr area in North-Rhine Westphalia.

Montigny-le-Tilleul (Belgium)

A small town in Wallonia which has some very impressive calcium quarries.

Tomar (Portugal)

This former Templars' capital is situated half-way between Lisbon and Porto on the Costa Prata (the Silver Coast).

Vincennes has links with a sister town in Indiana in the United States, also called Vincennes. A town part of the Dún Laoghaire-Rathdown county, located on the Dublin bay and hosting the famous Blackrock College.

Following the two World Wars, Vincennes, after helping the town of Vorges (situated in the Aisne County) to re-build in 1920 and later Condé-sur-Noireau (situated in the Calvados County) in 1945 became patron to both.

Vincennes is also committed to Fair trade initiatives it as undertaken a solidarity and sustainable development partnership with Gondar in Ethiopia.

AGENDA 21

Vincennes declared itself ecologically responsible in 2006. As far as sustainable development is concerned, the town is active in a number of varied domains including economics, society, transport, energy, housing and the quality of life amongst other areas.

DISCOVER

The must-sees

CHÂTEAU

The Vincennes Château is one of the most important in French History. It is the largest French royal Château to remain standing and with its 150 feet-high keep is one of the tallest medieval fortresses in Europe.

Its history goes back to the 12th century when Louis VII decided to have a hunting lodge built in the Forest of Vincennes (called Vilcena at this time). It was during the reign of Louis IX (1226-1270) that the Château officially became a royal residence which continued to be the case until the 14th century.

The Kings who succeeded undertook vast construction work when both a keep and an outer wall were erected amongst other aspects which changed the Château's appearance. Charles V (1364-1380) decided to have a holy chapel erected in 1379; however, this site was completed much later during the reign of Henry II (1547-1559). Many constructional changes were also carried out during Louis XIV's reign by the architect Louis Le Vau (1612-1670) who had the King's and Queen's pavilions erected as well as other buildings.

Although the Château of Vincennes was Louis XIV's first large construction projects, it was gradually neglected by the Court who settled permanently in Versailles.

The keep's vocation as a prison (which is what it had been since the 16th century) developed further during this period and was shelter in the 18th century to some famous prisoners such as Diderot, Latude, Mirabeau but also the Marquis of Sade.

The Château, which was occupied successively by various manufactures (porcelain, ceramics, weaponry) fell increasingly into ruin until it was taken over by the capital in 1796; although this transfer of occupancy saved the Château it brought about many changes to the edifice, in so far as Saint-Louis' manor disappeared, some of the towers were levelled and the portico considerably altered. From this time on one of the Paris area's largest military garrisons was concentrated on the site.

The Château was classed a National Heritage Site in 1913 and has served its dual purpose since the Second World War. The Chapel and keep are administered by the Ministry of Culture via the French governmental body, the National Monuments Centre, whereas the remaining parts are governed by the Ministry of Defence, the libraries and archive centres which are open to the public being run by the Defence Ministry's Historical Service.

The keep, which was restored in 2007, traces the Château's history and that of its occupants. As for the Holy Chapel it too re-opened in 2009 and houses both exhibitions and concerts.

TOWN HALL

The Town Hall which is the result of two distinct stages of construction work, the latter undertaken 44 years after the first (1891 and 1935) illustrates on the one hand the Neo-Renaissance style which was inspired by the model represented in the Paris Town Hall at the beginning of the French Third Republic, and on the other, the Art deco style, which is remarkably represented by the monumental staircase and the 480 inch-wide glass dome which weighs 30 tons. Both the staircase and the dome are classed National Heritage works.

The Town Hall's complete roofing as well as all its facades including those in the two entrance halls, in the Reception room, in the Wedding room and also those in the first deputy mayor's office situated south-westerly on the Ground Floor were listed on the French ISMH Regional Heritage Site list in 1999 by the regional historical study commission.

The paintings in the Weddings Room

These paintings which were produced by Maurice Chabas were classed National Heritage Sites in 1982. They evoke the Chateau, the Town Hall, the woods of Vincennes and the Daumesnil Lake.

CHURCH SAINT-LOUIS

Built by the architects Jacques Droz and Joseph Marrast between 1914 and 1924, the Church of Saint-Louis, thanks to its original Neo-Byzantine architecture characterizes the return of religious art which marked the first half of the 20th century. The church's interior decoration is, in fact, the result of the much talented artists who belonged to the Religious Art Workshops, in other words, Henri Marret and Maurice Denis who produced the frescos, Maurice Dhomme creator of the ceramics and Carlo Sarrabezolles and Raymond Subes who respectively designed the sculptures and wrought-iron craft. The whole of the Church of Saint-Louis was classed a National Heritage Site in 1996.
